Paul Harrod
Senior Lecturer in Motor Vehicle

"I look forward to the day I teach the apprentices. They're so keen and they really want to be here. They have a more mature approach to learning and they've been out in the big wide world so they appreciate their day in college. I love it and the professional banter we have in class. The apprentices get to learn the technical side of things and ask questions that they might not get the time to ask at work."

Dave Crombie, owner of Voltaward in Wokingham said:
"I had seen some leaflets and press articles about the college and heard that it was being revamped. It's where I went 30 years ago. I went to an Open Event and was blown away by how amazing the facilities are!"
